

Just at present there is some literature going the rounds of the country, literature that you will be unable to find in republican papers. These papers have taken up the case of Gen. Chalmers, the star performer in the bloody-strife farce that the g. o. p. is endeavoring to put on the boards in Mississippi. These papers now regard Chalmers as a sort of outraged angel. It was not always so. There was a time when these same republican papers were ready to proclaim this man a worse villain than Jeff Davis. They would not hesitate to do the same thing to-morrow, should Chalmers conclude that some other party offers him greater opportunities than the republican. Should Jeff Davis come out in favor of the republican party, we should at once be treated to a series of editorials from South State and South. Water, picturing in very poor colors the amount of worthy patriotism that must be engendered by such a change in politics. If any one is disposed to doubt this, we call his attention to the following article from The Nation, which gives some idea of what the republicans once thought of this elegant cutthroat, the man of whom they now speak as the incarnation of political virtues. The Nation says:

"It is amusing to observe the republican organs of the country, as one by one they are converted to the cause of the Union, and commend the 'creditable' action of the Mississippi republican convention in nominating that typical southern seat-warmer, Gen. James R. Chalmers, for the office of governor. They seem to express the 'hope' that the republicans will 'heartily sustain' this man whom a republican congress sent back to Mississippi 'thoroughly disgraced and despised.' The 'Union' is 'glad' that the 'unholy fiend' has been degraded to swallow any republican paper in the country. Four years ago, when we pointed out that Chalmers had been trying to edge his way into the republican party, the 'Union' was filled with indignation, and at the mere suggestion of such a thing. The Leader denounced him as 'an unholy fiend who massacred Union prisoners,' and declared in so many words that 'Chalmers and would not be received into our party.' It is a little hard for an editor to discover that the 'unholy fiend' was, after all, really an angel of light; but The Nation would long be staggered by any such difficulty."

The Despatch has a slight advantage over The Hartford Evening Post and The Cleveland Leader, inasmuch as it did not have an existence at the time it was fashionable for the republican press to call Chalmers an "unholy fiend." It is now at liberty to pile on the "angel of light" business to its heart's content. But under all the circumstances, it would be advisable for The Despatch to go slow. There is nothing what party Chalmers may be in after Mr. Harrison has lost the right to make federal appointments. He may go over to the unionists. In such an event The Despatch will feel an uncontrollable impulse to call Chalmers something like the "unholy darkness." As such a situation may almost be said to be among the political probabilities, South State would do well to measure out its present adulation rather sparingly. When dancing attendance on one of the political adventurers, the only safe rule is, never write a love letter. There is a republican saying, from very high authority, that letters ought to be burned. (After The Despatch has monkeyed with Chalmers for awhile, it will be able to improve upon that saying by advising that they should never be written.)

One should say as shy of Chalmers as one would of Ben Butler. It has no doubt been noticed that the party papers have not much to say for or against Ben. There is nothing what camp he will be in to-morrow. Everybody has been compelled to speak well and badly of him. The experience was found not to be a pleasant one. As a result, all hands have ceased to turn Ben over to the Delphic circle and its antedivine affidavit. It would be well to consign Chalmers to the past just but hard fate.

Anyhow, the democrats will not forget that the republican papers have had to say former times about their present candidate for governor in Mississippi. This kind of canonizing an "unholy fiend," because he is willing to lend himself to the cause of dirty republican work, will not deal with any great force to the intelligence of the country. And it is well to remember that the time is coming when an angel to the intelligence must be the most likely course. The people are beginning to feel that they have had a surfeit of the doctrine of hatred. This Chalmers dish is an attempt to force a little more of the nauseating course upon a cloyed people, shows that the alleged intelligence of the emphatic reply, of which we have heard so much, is rather flat affair. The genius of a party ought to be more fertile if it expects to. The old thing has worn down."

We would like to take this occasion to criticize republican papers for a little. In fact the assertion that Gov. Hill would use one of his speeches with an observation to the effect that he did not have his encyclopedia along. Every one of the probability point to the fact that he never said anything of the kind. This little addition to the speech was the afterthought of some fertile reporter, whose brilliancy far outweighed his love for the truth. Republican papers continually tell us that Hill is training for the democratic nomination for the presidency. Probably he is. Such being the case, he is too shrewd a man to make use of an expression that could only have been intended to insult Grover Cleveland.

But if Hill did say anything of the kind we would like to be furnished something like proof of the fact. It might cut an important figure when the question of non-intervention comes up. It might even go so far as to settle the complexion of the New York delegation. Mr. Hill will certainly never have used any such expression. Only a day or two since he made an important speech, in which he took occasion to speak of Cleveland in the very highest terms. He also said that the democratic party would continue to stand by the fight that Cleveland had marked out, and that himself as willing and anxious to engage in the struggle. All this looks as if Hill had no desire to insult the ex-president. So that we are bound to conclude that the alleged reference to the encyclopedia, existed only in the imagination of some ardent republican. While we may have no means of being sure of what Hill would like to say of Cleveland, we can be certain of what he would be likely to say. "This last story is entirely too thin. When the republican papers wish to seek for the edification of democrats, it will be necessary to assume a higher tone.

It is without the least surprise that the citizens road of the fire near the stock exchanges in yesterday morning's papers. The details of the attempt to put out the fire have a familiar ring about them that we have certainly heard somewhere before. Let us see. First, the hydrant was such a distance from the fire that all the available hoses in town could not reach within 75 feet. Well, there is nothing startling about this. As we are all philosophers, we reasoned that to get within 75 feet of a fire demonstrated the fact that we were headed in the right direction. We have no statistics that will inform us how how close we could get to a fire a year ago. It may have been 100 feet at that time. But there is some sort of an unfounded rumor to the effect that the 75 feet of Wednesday morning broke the record. The general impression is that we are improving. Some time ago The Herald remarked that there was no occasion for alarm. Possibly that paper possessed inside information by which it suspected that we were then able to approach within 55 feet of a fire. It concluded that at such a distance the spectators would be able to make intelligent observations, and remarks to such a greatly soothing nature, that beasts or man who might be in the burning building must have all alarm quieted. Some enthusiastic and hopeful looker-on might continue to cry out: "We are now within 75 feet of you, and we are steadily marching on with the ages. When we reach you, I hope of identifying your remains may be none, but think of your posterity. If nothing happens to impede our progress, they will be saved. Thinking of this, and remembering, above all things else, that there is no occasion for alarm on your part."

According to the old teachers of divinity, there were only "four last things to be remembered"—death, judgment, heaven and hell. Our situation, and some of the brilliant comments thereon, would add a fifth;—remember there is no occasion for alarm."

The latest quotation in the affidavit market is, 10 cents a week, delivered daily at four door or carried out the back yard, as you desire. As the number of callers increases at this figure, is constantly diminishing, it looks as if the ancient and weather-beaten asphalt field would have to go into some more modern business of soliciting bids and outs.

Such as you want. And, my hands,—not a pimple, neither a hair, nor any time ago;—and my fresh cheeks, and I'm getting a dimple.

I don't look at all like I used to, I know. My face was all blotches—complexion like a lemon.

No wonder they thought me and called me a fright;

To one need have pimples and skin gray and sallow,

If she'll tell what I took, every morn, and noon and night.

I asked the delighted young woman what we referred to, and she answered, "Dr. Sager's Golden Medical Discovery. It is the best beautifier in the world, because it cures the blood, and pure blood gives you health and good health is always beautiful."
